

ALCOHOL

Changes urged

The Australian Medical Association has criticised the self-regulation of alcohol advertising in the youth market, and called for a parliamentary inquiry into how young people are targeted through social media, online content and event marketing. The AMA, with the 70-member National Alliance for Action on Alcohol, held a national summit on alcohol marketing to young people and called for urgent changes.